Quick guide: voting online

Vote in a general meeting from your phone or computer in 6 steps. It takes about 3 minutes.

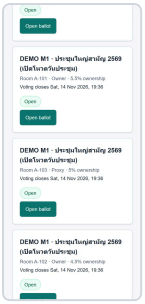

1. Sign in with Google

Open the link in the meeting invitation email and tap "Continue with Google". Use the Google account of the email you gave the juristic person office, so the system knows which rooms are yours.

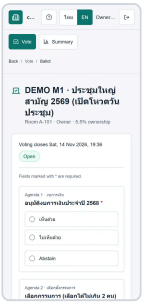

2. Read and accept the privacy notice

The first time you sign in, and each time the office changes it, the system shows the privacy notice (PDPA). Tap "I accept" to continue.

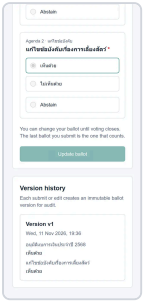

3. Choose the meeting and room

The Vote page shows one item per room for each meeting. If you have several rooms, vote for each room separately. Rooms you hold as a proxy are marked "Proxy". Tap "Open ballot" on an item whose status is "Open".

4. Answer every agenda item, then submit

Choose an answer for each agenda item. Items marked * are required. Some items allow several choices, as shown. "Abstain" cannot be combined with other choices. When you are done, tap "Submit ballot".

5. Check or change your vote until voting closes

After you submit, the item shows "Submitted v1". Open the same ballot to change and submit again until voting closes. Only the last version counts, and every version is kept for audit.

6. See the results

When voting has closed and the committee has approved the results, you get an email. The Summary page shows each agenda result, a PDF file, and a reference to check against the official record.

Frequently asked questions

I signed in but do not see my room
The email of your Google account may not match the one the office has, or you gave a proxy for that room. Contact the juristic person office to check your email and voting rights.

I do not have a Google account
Create a free Google account and give its email to the office before the meeting, or vote with a paper ballot at the registration desk.

I want someone else to vote for me
Give a proxy form to the office. Once approved, the room moves to the proxy's list and the owner cannot vote for that room in that meeting. One proxy can hold at most 3 rooms per meeting.

I voted online and also handed in a paper ballot
Each room has one vote. The office chooses one ballot and records why. To keep it clear, vote through one channel only.

What is advance voting?
Some meetings open voting before the meeting day. Between the advance window and the meeting day, voting is paused; the item shows when it opens next.

How do I read the result table?
Rooms: Number of rooms that chose this option. Each room counts once, online or on paper. · Of all ownership: Ownership share of the rooms that chose this option, out of all rooms in the building (100%). Used by rules "of total ownership", such as 3/4 of all. · Of votes cast: Out of the ownership of rooms that voted only, including rooms that abstained. Rooms that did not vote are left out. Used by rules "of rooms that voted". · Abstain: The room voted but chose no side. It counts as a room that voted, so it makes rules "of rooms that voted" harder to meet. · Rule: What an option needs to pass. The column marked "Decides this item" is the one compared with the rule.

Why can't I see the results yet?
Results appear only after voting closes and the required number of committee members approve them.

How do I know a result document is genuine?
The announcement has a reference and a SHA-256 value. Tap "Verify this reference" and compare the value shown with the one in the document. If they match, it is the same result the system keeps.
